Program Content

- Online preliminary questionnaire to point out development areas.
- Five days of classroom training are completed depending on the participants' knowledge and needs.
- Training is followed by a 3 hour-long, individual simulation exercise in a virtual reality space partly directed by an entirely unique, biofeedback-based 360 degree projection technology.
- The participant and the program leader jointly evaluate the performance to provide actions for the participant's demanding situations.
- Based upon the experience, the participant's presentational knowledge is reinforced where necessary, which he or she can develop and turn into a skill in the course of a new simulation exercise.
- Following the simulation, the participant receives a written analysis and a development plan along with the recordings.
